

Esin Sehirin Insanları

ACCURACY®
JEWEL LETTER TABLET

— LETTER RULED —

8½ IN. x 11 IN. / 50 SHEETS 16 SUB. CANARY / No. 62-0160

THE MEAD CORPORATION, DAYTON, O. 45402 himself into the sea. Despite intensive searching his body was not recovered. Melmet Ali Bey was 21 years old, ~~D~~ he spent the last years of his life on the front. He fought bravely at Gallipoli, in the Caucasus and in Palestine.

The death of Melmet Ali, a polite and sensitive Turkish officer who studied poetry and literature, is ~~deeply~~ mourned by his comrades in arms."

Kamil Bey looked at the photograph in the magazine for a time with a deep sorrow. Yes he was a handsome young man, Lieutenant Ali Efendi... ~~The most~~
~~it was~~ terrible that in the well retouched photo, he appeared with his soft smile, to be quite optimistic and most fortunate. The photo looked as though it were taken to be given to match makers to show ~~to~~ some hard to please young lady. All of a sudden Kaval Bey's hair stood on end, he looked about himself, frightened. There seemed to be ~~other~~ two distinct voices whispering in the semi-darkness of the room, one of them Demir's voice and the other that of Lieutenant M. Ali Efendi...

"Oh my beloved Istanbul"
"my beloved Istanbul..."

What I stumbled could be seen through the window resembled the prostrate body of a seriously wounded young man, ~~He had~~ ~~He had~~ seemed to be moaning with the street vendors. ~~He had~~ ~~He had~~, ~~the~~ voices rising and falling in the depths of the evening dusk ~~and to be~~ ~~was~~ ~~was~~

Now look here folks you're a clever person, what's the catch to this American Water-buffalo? The catch? ...

I haven't met any body who knows the catch ... some are saying that America's such a ~~bad~~ lousy place that they're gonna make the Ottoman pay for a striking waterbuffalo wonder-oh Others say that you shouldn't mess with America ~~they'll~~, you know, they'll steal you blind. In America a kid won't say "good morning" to his father or vice versa without getting paid, they won't piss in your hand for nothing. I don't know any more than that...

unfortunately, this hodgepodge of nonsense only served to confuse Kāmil Bey ~~the~~ the more.

When the rag-tag bunch realized the Kāmil Bey was listening attentively they began to bubble with chatter. ~~and~~, exaggerating the inconsistent bits and pieces of news that had been coffeehouse gossip for months they set out to prove that they were current with the affairs of the world.

27

In the night on the mainland there was not a single star and not a single light shone from the ~~sky~~ shore.

In the deep darkness, the ship struggled to make headway with a gasping, heartrending effort.

Kāmil Bey was mulling over in his mind the words of the men who had boarded the ship in Cavalehale and struggled ^{very} to understand the human realities which lay — Orders are being studied for giving Lieutenant and captains shoes and 3 meters of steel for 230 kurush. It is reported that since hearing this news several officers have begun to dress completely in (hirpani).

— Reserve officer Mustafa Vami an official of the intermediate education office of the Ministry of Education, unable to endure the disaster to his homeland shot himself with his pistol today in his apartment. Thus in the past months the number of officers and soldiers who have shot themselves for the same reason has risen to three. ^{Among} ~~one~~ there was Arip Bey, a reserve officer from Erzincan and another reserve officer whose name will not be mentioned.

Now, finally bringing these lines to an end I will see what of my family I am. Then the best thing to do is, to buy a ticket to the Islands, get on the last boat, fire a bullet into my head and surrender myself to the sea, to the endless deeps, to death. I shall see the sun, see everything in the world for the last time today. Everything ... my beloved Istanbul ... !

A. TRAGIC DEATH — The adjutant of ^{Colonel Socki Bey} ~~the~~ Commander of the Chankale Garrison, Melmet Ali Bey yesterday evening on the last boat to the islands, left his gloves, cap and a large sealed enveloped in the private cabin of the royal family, went to the bow of the ship and firing a shot into his head threw behind the mindless chatter.

The American Mandate — for the Ambassador in Madrid — ~~especially~~ after the Greeks landed in Izmir — This had been the only hope for salvation. "We'll just try to get by this calamity! If the sultan-caliph and the capitol are saved the rest will be easy." How would the rest be easy? What good is a sultan — a caliph — a capitol — without a country, without her people. And then to pull ourselves together...? Won't the enemy think of these things? Will they leave an opening, a crack in the door — to give us a chance to render ourselves?

Kamil Bey lit a cigarette and inhaled deeply. If the battle he was waging in his mind with the mandate, with the fate of the country, only to keep from thinking of ^{the things which} what concerned him most. He was surely deceiving himself.

The next morning they moved on to Istanbul. How would he find his affairs in Istanbul, how would he get past the initial shyness, the financial difficulties?

In her last letter, Nermine's aunt had written that they should come directly to her house, that, should any other course of action cross their minds, they were going to see a vastly changed Istanbul.

The aunt was one of those women who turn their husbands into ^{creatures} ~~men~~ who look like convicts and act like dirty old ^{lechers} ~~wives~~. In order to make it clear that she use to my country in this disastrous period...

Oh, if only I could do some great deed and have myself hanged! To hang... Now how much easier that word seems to me.

* How good it is that I went back on my decision not to read the papers. If I did not read the papers I could not have today destroyed and cast off the shame with which I have been struggling for so long. I could not have made my decision. But how I ~~ended~~ in supposing that I had removed myself from human beings. While I was supposedly that I had long since lost myself I was living alongside, in the hearts of men whom I don't even know. Oh my brother, Lieutenant Kodrik beg whose face I have never seen! I thank you, if you had not told the newspaper of what happened to you, who knows how much farther I might have crawled along. Thanks a lot! May Long life to you... See the success of the nation for me!

— Lieutenant Kodrik beg one of the base Drill and Instruction Officers writes: I was going to Ennunca on the Aksaray streetcar. The driver, Kozem (Number 667) was insulting a Turkish woman. I had just started to say, "It is not proper to speak that way to women. Does a man insult his sister?" when the driver began saying, "This officer business is out of date? You can't tell anybody anything. And you can't shout around any more." His co-worker, Ahmet (Number 613) backed him up. I was obliged to call the police.

had been a ravishing beauty in her youth she used, with a chuckle, to cite the proverb, "You can tell from the daughter how the mother used to be."

The uncle was of the type which loses its hair early and early on runs to paunchiness. He wore a diamond ring on his little finger and a platinum mason's ^{medallion} at the end of his watch-chain. Although he pretended to understand nothing of politics, all of his business was handled through the government with the support of ^{the} Party bosses. Although he seemed to know of nothing further away than Edirne, he had for years been the representative of ^{some} ~~of~~ ^{corporations} Germany's most important business firms. During the reign of Abdulhamit he made some changes. When the Union and Progress party took over his situation ^{as for the Armistice period} firmed up some more. And, during the Armistice, he had no complaints.

When they ~~met~~ met in Vienna in the second year of the war, he appeared to be loaded. He ^{had} listened, half-heated and condescending, to Kamil Bey's money woes and told him to give a power of attorney ~~to~~ for buying and selling to a trusted lawyer and to forget about the rest.

The aunt had a daughter named Sabriye, two years younger than Deniz. Last year she had been divorced from the handsome Lieutenant ~~whom~~ whom she had married at the onset of the war. "No she was not just spoiled ... she was odd. Sometimes ^{unwieldy} ~~bigamous~~, sometimes permissible and recommended for general health.

Entertaining our customers by playing and singing ~~will~~ ~~be~~ from 5:00 A.M. to Midnight will be the famous violinist Ihsan, noted top-fiddle player Sofi, Kamanist Mustafa, Ud players Ihsan & Muzaffer, clarinetist Seyfi and vocalists ^{Messrs.} Muhittin & Sikt & Madam Shamzans.

The National Theatre in Shedzadehish: A tremendously eloquent play Lone and Hungover in honor of the noted artist Nasit Bey — Circus, boy loses, a laugh filled Comedy — Mercedes Anne, rogue of Istanbul, — Whose is the Child? a comedy — Breuer's Quartet —
The above comedies ^{will be} played excellently by Nasit Bey and his ^{co-actors} ~~company~~.

— The Kemal Bey theater: The sensitive Marje Jacobini and co-star Lea Gix in Atlanta — 6 reels.

— Istanbul's best appointed theater, Alemdar. — Daily Matinee performances for women, evening performances for men: Nikra one of the great Italian Dramas.
— 6 reels. A police, love drama.

" Yesterday evening I went out for a while hoping to ^{warm} ~~warm~~ somewhat to the idea of living. Everything I saw all night told me that I must be saved from this selfish unkindness. This morning I arose as usual.
I washed myself. However I ^{did my} ~~cleansed my~~ body more than usual. Man is obliged to ask the help of spiritual powers on disastrous days. I asked God to forgive my sins. But the thing that timely warms my heart is to be of no

worse
~~at least~~ Sometimes bad and haughty, sometimes sweet... In one case she was quite proud, on the ^{with good} other hand she was (nervous) enough to throw herself at the first man who came along. She was, at times, ♀ passionate and, at times, one of those frigid women who can think of nothing but "going to sleep." Women like her never in a million years find the man they are seeking - they lead unhappy lives and die unhappy deaths.

How was he going to live in the same house with this family? Or, even worse, how was he going to manage not to live with them?

The first officer said hello in passing. Before he could say, "Good that he didn't stop to chat," the captain came by puffing on his pipe. His face was puffed ^{from} anger & combination of sleeplessness and a wine hangover.

Pieter Brey, out of politeness, asked

- When will we arrive in Amsterdam, Captain?
 - Tomorrow ... ~~today~~ at about 9:00 in what part of Amsterdam do you live in?
 - Do you know the city?
 - I know Galata, ~~Burgoyken~~, the covered Bazaar ...
 - How to explain where Vishantzebo is ... Did you ever go to the French hospital?
 - Once ...
 - Ok! It's right behind there! Coming up from the Bazaar ...
 - Is it your own house?
- No!

the power provided you need

Dr. Hasim Bey who informed on Dr. Geddes Bedrettin Bey ~~will be given~~ a 100 Lira reward and the Ottoman Medal. Dr. Redet Bey shot himself when stopped by the police in Fatsihöyük in Beykoz... what does this mean? What wages are these, the wages of treachery, of cowardism?

Last night I saw you in my dream, my commander!
You put your hand on my ~~shoulder~~ shoulder and said, 'shake yourself, let the dust of humiliation fly from you!' In the morning I awoke bewildered. More carefully I awoke and was surprised to remember this line of verse. On my honor as an officer I swear, my commander, I have tried with all my strength to shake myself. I had not shaved for a week. I shaved. I had not changed my clothes. I changed them. That I might be saved, I wanted ^{with all my strength} to be cast into life. I passed my eyes over the entertainment ads in the newspapers. I will try it!
I promise you, my commander, a last try... the last?
How many last tries?... I am not worthy of your love, your sorrows... I am a coward...

— The Tepelbashi Theatre in Beyoğlu:

Coming Wednesday, The Opera Carmen a long film in 6 reels.

— Do you wish to spend a pleasant evening? Come to the Gulistan Tavern on Döşemealtı in Beyoğlu. We are featuring alcoholic beverages that we both

- "Yes!" - Lying for ~~no~~ reason was upsetting the Kemal Bey, - "what I mean is, it belongs to my wife's relatives..." Now he felt that he was making an unnecessary explanation. He cut it short, "It cannot be considered ours."
- You said me if I had ever hit a mine during the war. Let me ask you, ~~has your house~~ ever burned?
- Twice
- I had heard that there are a lot of fires in Istanbul.
Is that so?
- It certainly is.
- The captain stared at the horizon for a moment - straight ahead
- I hear you were talking to the vendors in Chonakale. Did they say anything significant, about what's going on?
- No, they're illiterate people... they just can't understand.
- According to the Greek Pilot your Sultan is in a bad way.
- How so?
- Mustafa Kemal Pasha pays no attention to him. He wants to fight... Vasilios said... "If the sultan can't take care of him my armies will!"
- Is he going to march ~~to~~ inland?
- The greeks give him no food, so milly milly will march. If war breaks out will you join?
- ~~He~~? ... I don't know! I am no soldier... war is the business of soldiers...
- Don't you have reserve officers in your country?

325 / 20 / 66

Two months wages to be paid.

Wages to be paid bi-monthly. [One month the wages will be paid out ~~in time~~] The 10% taken from wages for retirement shall not be deducted anymore or the deduction ~~should~~ ^{shall} be divided into three parts to be paid equally by the government, the employer (in this case the war department), and the worker. [This demand has been met.] Paid vacations [Because it was determined that 60 days vacation would cost 80,000 liras this ~~was~~ ^{was} refused.] Overtime pay [Accepted]. 8 hour work day [refused]. Worker representatives to oversee the disposal of already deducted funds [Accepted]. Amnesty for strikers [Accepted]. Pay for those days lost while on strike [refused].

What sort of policies are these, my commander? Who is arguing with whom? Why? Bread should be given ~~to~~, if there is any, to those who ask for it. One should not hesitate. If there is no bread one should make do and not ask for it! No. This world cannot be the world we left when war broke out. ~~This~~ means that we didn't go to war, we left the old world. And now we have cast by the wind on a different world, a strange world. The external similarity is but a lie... Is this some nice game, my commander... Are our enemies nothing for us... ^{Should} But one endures this... Should one endure any of this?

I read in the papers... I did not believe it, & still don't believe it.

- I suppose there are now. In the past they never used to draft men from Standard.
- Oh how lucky... He thought for a moment: — Well you're a foreign service officer anywhere in you will go again to some foreign country:
- No! I have no interest in the foreign service. ^{Only} Because all ~~other~~ ^{other} countries were closed by the war did I work in the Embassy in Spain... — He ^{had} almost said "because we were broke!" He gritted his teeth: That's how it was... Temporary...
- I understand! That means you never fought?
- Yes!
- With us it is difficult not to fight... without a good excuse...
- Difficult? How?
- They insult you openly... One social contacts are all broken... Even worse, my financial situation suffers. How are things in your country?
- I don't know!... I spent most of my life in Europe... I tried to enlist during the Balkan Wars, they said 'when the time comes will call you,' and they never called. I suppose there was no time... to call.
- Did some of your friends, your acquaintances go to war?
- certainly...
- Were those those who died up were wounded?

The Thousand riders, with the joy of children ^{rejoice} we rode out
the Thousand riders, that day we sent a noisy horde to rout repelled, not only by humanity but by myself as well. But there is someone who can help me now in this dead end, someone who can, perhaps, show me a way out other than death. This someone could be you, my commander. I believe in you!

You wouldn't lie. You wouldn't deceive me. Several times I told myself to run and take refuge with you.
But I could not stand to be seen so broken-down.
Had I come to you, you would have rescued me from the noose of death, wouldn't you? Last night, in my dream you were marching towards Central Asia, the regimental banner in front and the band behind. To the motherland ^{to the west} to Turan... from the mountains numberless horsemen flowed onto the plain... They were all ours, all our horsemen.

The Thousand riders, with the joy of children ^{rejoice} we rode out
the Thousand riders, that day we sent a noisy horde to rout.

We have ride Yohya Kural Bago's Horsemen poem the words for a month... We make the steppes reverberate.
I myself covered with sweat. Sweat! God forbid!
It is as though I have returned from a plunge in ~~the~~ a sea of fog... I am pleased not only with my heart but with my skin as well. With my whole body & my whole existence. Biting my fist I cried till morning.

— Dockyard workers on strike. 1500 workers have begun to strike for the following demands:

- I presume so...

- It's hard, my dear Kamel Bey; your situation is a hard one...

Kamel Bey's eyes narrowed with the uneasiness rising from deep within him, he struggled to make out the face of the Captain. Were all mestizos such cold-blooded realists because they were treacherous or were they necessarily treacherous, rude and selfish because they were such cold-blooded realists?

The old ship's engines rumbled clunkily and her hull trembled from the tip of her masts to the bilges. Her name was the Mari Galant. "So mestizos were realists? How could they give such a ^{"cute"} playful name to an old freighter? What a far stretch of the imagination...?" He had heard the name Mari Galant somewhere. As soon as he asked the Captain he had remembered. One of the three ships on Columbus' first voyage had been named Mari Galant. To make it more ^{for reasons of religion} respectable they had changed it to Santa Maria - Holy Mary.

He was surprised at the similarity, first of all between ~~himself~~ and these two ships and then between himself and Christopher Columbus. The genoese sailor had ~~not~~ set out thinking that he would remain in India and come to America instead. As for Kamel Bey, he knew for sure that he was going to Istanbul but he could, in no way, imagine how he would find the city of his birth.

A painful start into thought time. He thought the Hasan was shot in the lower back and subsequently died. Although the murderer, an Ottoman citizen named Dimitri son of Tarash, was apprehended the Greeks came and removed him from Police headquarters.

We have been informed that the family ~~of~~ of the dead policeman will receive 20 liras in government aid!

Twenty liras... Has a turkish life gotten this cheap?... How many sacks of coal will 20 liras buy, how many loaves of bread? Not long ago there was a rise of 20 paras, a loaf of bread got to 17 paras... The government aid comes to 120 loaves of bread!... If there are five in the family... At one loaf per person per day 24 days of ~~scarcity~~ bread... Yes we have gotten surprisingly cheap, my dear commander, they say, "he isn't worth two lira," and that's ~~it~~ is what we have become!
So much for us!
Should we do?

My brain throbs ceaselessly with a swelling up of confused and contradictory thoughts. There is an endless pitched battle in my head. The units ~~fall~~, the ranks are moved down. Every voice says "death" and the voice, louder than them all ^{whispering, low,} "make it quick...". "make it quick coward!" Perhaps this is the ^{madness} to go mad. It is as if the walls are closing in, crushing my lungs. The ceiling and floor have closed in so that I fear I will not be able to stand. I am suffocating. Now I can Funch Captain -- without really knowing what for -- and walked toward the stairs.

Through the间隙 between the sea and the sky were leaden grey; the islands as far as Kajishdag, Kadikoy and Istanbul (Haydar) were hazy images seen through a dirty window.

Fines had saved all of the quarters from little Hoca Sophia to Etyemez, ^{the roofs?} those wooden houses spored by the flames, had fallen into ruins during the long years of the war. Even the domes and minarets of the great mosques seemed no longer firm and solid, ~~but~~ rather, remaining one of heaps of cotton balls.

As the more gallant ~~sailed~~ steamed into port around the Ahitope lighthouse Nemira and Ayshe came up on deck all neatly dressed.

Ayshe was halibiting, "Where is Aunt Sabire's house? Show me mommy!" and Nemira ^{for a time} looked upon the Istanbul which she had not seen for 8 years. Ignoring the heat chilling greyness which seemed to pervade and the foreign worshippers playing the straits she gave a sigh full of ^{Turkish} longing! "Oh my beloved Istanbul!"

I have learned this secret from the struggle of life
That death is the transmutation of toil into peace.

for several days this couplet roams through my mind...
The poet sees it. "Death is the true mutation of toil into peace"
he said... why not?

The papers are full of crimes today...

— Hristatos, stopped a civil policeman in Dolapdere, searched and released him. He asked for the ~~weapons~~ of the other policemen, one Abdurrahman. When the gun was not turned over he shot the policeman in the head...
He turned off Akarca ~~the~~ street into Tatala and escaped...
Thus Hristatos killed his fifth policeman, for ~~months~~ he has been walking around ~~gold~~ ^{free as a bird} as you please, I saw his picture. A heavy eyed filthy kid! ~~He~~ I hear the English protect this scoundrel...

— It is the bullet over Arca of Aksaray. The police called upon some suspicious ~~the~~ persons to stop.
When they failed to stop the police opened fire.
A man by the name of Negmuddin was killed...
Hristatos kills policemen and the police ^{shoot} ~~kill~~ their countrymen. What an unimaginable mess...

— A man named Salih was returning home at 10:00 o'clock when his arm ~~threw~~ brushed some intoxicated Greek soldiers who turned on him and began to beat him. When the police attempted to interfere the Greeks opened fire with their pistols. A policeman, badge number 640, named

II

" The notebook and letter in this sealed envelope are to be given to the commander of the fortifications of Gharakkale, Colonel Sheuket Bey, after my death.

M. Ali "

" My dear Commander,

It now becomes necessary to leave this life, to take refuge in death. I am in no condition now, as I write these lines, to completely explain why I do this.

I am overwhelmed by the dark thoughts which swarm about my head. I will seek to escape them in death.

Love... Death... And the wounds tormenting my nation... This incomprehensible defeat... Yesterday's conversation with a fellow officer and several other reasons have suddenly made easy a decision to die which has been ripening in me for months. You see, I say 'made easy!' Because this is not a new idea for me. After the poor Turks fell beneath the boots of the enemy, ^{Living became} ~~it became~~ difficult first of all. Then it became impossible. My friend explained in full ~~the~~ how the recklessness, the disregard for death that we showed in the war was stupidity. I ^{pray} hope to God that those of my comrades in arms who have decided to live will be stronger than I. I could stand no more. May God grant you the opportunity to do great works.

Dr. Omur Abdurrahman Price: 50 Kuvush.

forgive me, my commander. I cannot keep from writing down these disgusting things. One cannot say, "don't let them treat illness." But should there not be some concealment of shameful things? I asked you before what we had done that could not be forgiven -- Here is our crime! in The greatest of crimes, the most unforgivable: ^{all caps.} shamelessness!

Today, towards morning I dozed off for a while. I awoke with a terrible headache. So I ~~tried~~ ^{put it} ache that I thought the veins in my neck would burst, that my eyes would fly from their sockets. Finally it is time to end this fluttering about. I thought all night. The best way... my sister lives on the ^{Bayrakada} Bayrakada Island. I havent seen her in a long time. If I get up and go over there, coming back by the last boat... the moonlight... the coolness of the sea... an easy death! I will fill my pockets with stones. Must there be a funeral? I will not have caused any trouble for those left behind! Like those who are sought in the missing person ads... If a person's corpse is not found one can even hope that he is still alive. Thus there is nothing left to fear in death. My beloved pistol, my beloved Marmara will help.

With their pistols. A policeman, Dodge number 640, named

My ^{soul} spirit will always be devoted to the success of the Turks. But I no longer have the strength to wait and see it with my own eyes. I feel a great sorrow. You will read in the attached notebook how I dragged myself step by step to my decision to die. I wrote it in muddled bits and pieces. You will understand. forgive me my dear Commander, farewell!

Your unfortunate adjutant,
first Lieutenant M. Ali "

After thinking for a longtime I have decided to keep a diary. I cannot really tell why; perhaps to relieve myself. I have also thought at length about where, among all the things that have befallen us, I would begin. My pen ^{could not} bear to speak of the battles I have been in. I am left with my own feelings. The enemy ships appear before my eyes, passing through the straits with an ill mannered pride. No matter how I try I cannot push it back in my mind, I cannot forget. first ten torpedo boats, then Cruisers and lastly ~~battleships~~ ^{and less} battleships entered our pure Marmara, 22 English, 12 Italian, ^{french} 17 Italian and 4 Greek. The balance for our Battle of Gallipoli stood at 250,000 dead... How can such an awful price be paid for such a shameful result.

The ships passing here, when they arrive in Istanbul, immediately ^{unload} disembark soldiers who hold all of the important points in the city. The English have grabbed the railroad from Haydar pasha to Eski shehir. The French have taken the ^{Izmir} ~~rail~~ line and the Italians hold it as far as Konya. The railroads are the blood vessels of a country. Does it mean they have cut our arteries. What will we do... what can we do?

^{Excuse} The foreign officers are coming to get the breech mechanisms of our cannon. I asked my commander for leave. He said "yes" without asking why. I am going to Istanbul. To Istanbul... To Captive Istanbul... Did we deserve all of this? I told myself to ask the Captain when I said good by. I did not dare to. I tried, maybe ten times. And ten times I gave up the idea. Did we deserve it? Did we deserve it? What does it mean to deserve?

^{now} Advice rings in my ears. It seems at one time to resemble the sound of the ship's engines. No! These are subterranean murmurings ^{empty} monologues from the world of the dead. Vain sounds... This is the sound of Gabriel's Trumpet. How do I know? from the chilling of my soul... The scythe of Death hems on my head... Licking my hair... Is it death? It cannot be! It is the ^{Ressurection} ~~Judgement~~... yes, ^{Plainly} ~~for ever~~ the ~~Judgement~~! We shall all mesh to the last judgement, the Day of Reckoning, to give account... before the scales...

A while ago I woke my orderly and had him bring down my pistol. At Three in the morning... No! At three fifteen. It was the third time in seven months on your living dead ~~there are two hands for every head~~ there are two hands for every head ~~(head)~~ are you a corpse which lacks ~~movement~~ move the hands that you may make it yours, your head you are a ~~corpse~~ ~~feeling, no movement, woe~~ ~~repossess~~ living Corpse ~~feeling, no movement, woe~~, no fuss you surprise me man, you were not always ~~so~~

That I could not resist this desire. Poor Mehmet

Son of Mehmet looks into my face, uncomprehending...

"Is there mischief of death, sir," he asks with alarm!

Will you tell me, my Commander, we have been together for so long. We have worked together in the face of death, was I this powerless...? was I this rotten...?

I spun my pistol. What is it to die? And after death?... If the soul never dies as the religious books say?... then what use would it be to kill myself. I long for death hoping to escape the throbbing in my head. Could a man have the strength to ~~die~~ escape this?... where should I find it, the answer to this question...
Outside it is as black as pitch... I see the distance lightning flashes. I am confused. lightning flashes. As if to say, "There is light beyond death", as if to say ^{Peace} "comfort". May God forgive my sins!
Did we sin a lot, my Commander? I put the muzzle to my temple. My body trembled from head to toe...
A whisper startled me:

I believe it not, though ^{well} I see it ~~with~~ my eyes

By this Death's hand the true believer never dies

I quickly lowered my weapon... These lines were by Mehmet Akif Bey... How did they come to mind?
What was the rest of it?

~~All~~ ~~corpse~~ ~~and~~ there are two hands on living dead

So move the hands that you may repossess the head

Are you a Corpse? What, no feeling movement woe

~~You~~ You surprise me friend, you were not always so

Is it true, my Commander? Was I not always so?
And if I were not what has happened to me? How can I consider such a miserable death? Why could I not find death while fighting for my country? Is there nothing to be done now? Am I to live? Is no use for anything? To live or use it is necessary to wait... I cannot consider waiting! This all must end and soon... I understand this. I have studied it, it is impossible to wait... But, my commander, then again it is ~~not~~ easy to kill oneself! Oh how beautiful it was this morning after the rain. No one knows this but those who spent the night sleepless and distraught. They ~~tell them~~ say, "he went mad" of those who kill themselves. Ah, if only I could go mad... You have seen that I do not fear death, my commander; I am afraid of not dying. That is,
I am terrified that this grief may endure after death. Is it the body that suffers or is it the soul?
~~What~~ What a blessing to know for sure!

Yesterday evening there was a fire in Kasim pasha.
I watched for a while through the window but as it grew & could not sit still, I dressed and went out.
400 houses burned, two ~~houses~~ a church and a police station. The houses were wooden, falling apart.
In the high wind they caught fire quickly like bunches of dry grass and collapsed. Bright red nails and even planks whistled through the air like heavy machine gun bullets.

Everywhere there were the cries of women and the screaming of children. I talked with a naval officer. In 10 years there were 21 fires in Istanbul, 50,000 houses burned. More than five million square meters were taken by fire. ~~This means that~~ Even had we won the war we would have found our capitol a burned over ruin. How can this be, my commander! After so many ^{battles} bloody struggles can we have been unable to defend anything? This is a curse... why did God leave us thus on the earth?... why did he close the doors of hope in our faces?... why my commander? What have we done? Please tell me, what terrible crime have we committed that cannot be forgiven?

I decided to read the papers. I could only hold to that decision for a week. In the past I made up my mind slowly, but when I made it up, I stuck to it. You, my commander, you are a witness to this... You saw how easily I gave up cigarettes! But now I am become powerless, completely... I am empty inside. I cannot force myself to do anything. This is nonsense. To resist demands a goal. If there is no goal, if there is nothing to live for then why struggle? ..

I looked at the newspapers. The articles were all idiotic... all ruthless...

I just noticed that I unwillingly keep some of the news in my mind. One cannot even call this "keeping something in mind." I read without understanding at all. And then I remember it as though I had not read it anywhere, as though I had made it up. As though I had made it up...
Because it is all ^{your} half-torn... confused...
These things should not interest me at all... But even so I cannot keep from writing them down in my notebook.

— Recently the police rounded up 113 young girls ^{on} charges of prostitution in the areas hit by fire. The arrested were unable to obtain licenses for prostitution (all of whom are below the legal age). Because half of the girls were found to be infected by venereal disease responsible agencies are unable to determine what should be done with them.

Missing Person: first Lieutenant Mustafa Behçet, commander of the Base Defence Unit of the 20th Corps: Last seen on Riyale street on the evening of the fall of Damascus and presumed to have been taken prisoner there; no news has been received of his death or survival. Those who know news of this person are requested, ~~to~~ in the name of humanity, to write to the following address ...

-- No.

— Those who know the whereabouts of first Lieutenant Muhamet of Ishtip ~~the~~ former ^{official} director of the Aleppo Depot

...

There you have life ... There death in what place is Ishtip ... What place Aleppo? ~~poor, poor, people!~~
They were driven, like fallen leaves, before the wind.
Doubtless there are many among them who eagerly clutched at life, though their fates seemed much darker than this fate of mine. And again there are many who would envy me, the way I look to others; many who would want to be in my place. I have no money worries. I am handsome. I am tall, broad shouldered...
How should they know that such a one walks am and comes with death, that he will soon succumb himself to it?

— General Clinic: A two month's treatment can cure ~~gonorrhoea~~ ^{trigged} with 5 infections of ^{Penicillin} Neosalvarsan, Syphilis with 15 infections.

The Godwills Drugstore, Postoffice Street...

— An extremely effective medicine for sagging abdominal muscles and weakness: Erlokin Priva, can be obtained at The Mimasyan Drugstore in Bahçekapı. Price: 100 Kurash.

— Prophylaxis: The only way to avoid gonorrhoea and syphilis ... Prepared by Venereal and skin disease specialist

I am certain that they write the truth about everything.
Every Monday the Action française writes, "Bolshevism will crumble, it cannot last out the week."⁽²⁾ Everything they ~~say~~^{have said for 3 years} thus ~~is~~^{to be} to be true so why shouldn't this, I can't imagine. — Closing his eyes helplessly he listened for a time to the grumbling of the engines. (He sighed). — God help us!
"If this damnable bolshevism doesn't fall apart in a year or two, then you're in for it."

Kamil Bey, who was fed up to the teeth with this subject, waved a smile,
— I don't think so! for the past 200 years we have suffered so much at the hands of the ^{thugs of} Fascists that I can't imagine anything worse.

— You just watch out! ... Is bolshevism anything like Tzarin? ... "Tzarin" is what we know as "monarchy" ...
We say "king" They say "Tsar" ... just as you say "Sultan" ... we may be of different faiths of different creeds. It doesn't matter. Because we are each ruled by a being. But when it comes to bolshevism...

— What does bolshevick mean, daddy?

For a second Kamil Bey didn't grasp the question.
— Bolshevism? ... It means "Majority" my dear.
— In what language?
— Russian
— Do you know Russian
— No!

-- if you don't know Russian then how do you know that Bolshevik means "majority"?

"Thank God my daughter will be a realist" Ramiel Bay thought.

As for Nermine, somehow she was still preoccupied with the danger of floating mines. She smiled, tensely, without joy, preoccupied.

They arrived at Canakkale toward noon; the captain went above to see someone. Because the memory of ~~the~~ the bloody battle which occurred here was ^{still} fresh in everyone's mind they were all on deck.

Ramiel Bay inquired about recent developments or those who came to the ship to sell buckshot and failed to receive any illuminating response. Foreign troops were said to have settled on both sides of the straits. Even so a man named Hambi Bay had smuggled a lot of weapons, with the aid of ~~God~~, to Anatolia. The more informed said that, yes Mustafa Kemal had "started an uprising", yes he really started an uprising but no where near here! Some said, "On the Russian border, ^{where} the Third Army is," others, "he marched and marched into the hinterland and came to Ankara" (General) If you look at it straight, my friend, what good is a ^(General) ~~palabas~~ without an army! He can take as much land as he can sit on... yet, if only this plague of ~~palabas~~ hadn't been inflicted on the land of the Ottomans! Before they won their victory over the invincible, God love us, this Pasha talk will be wiped out completely. Around here command rests with our Anzavur Pasha, he is a soldier's pasha, mind you & a devout muslim and a leader ^{long} ~~of~~ men he is, our Anzavur Pasha! With binoculars in his right hand and a ^{who} ~~laptop~~ in his left (The kind of pasha who goes around), who ~~prays~~ ^{5 times a day} and prays those who don't rush to the mosque 5 times a day like prayer leads... I wouldn't know about all that, ^{But if} you don't pay attention to the Aydin - Odemis region you're missing it all. 'Cause if you look at Aydin or that infidel Izmir or Nazilli or even Odemis, then you'll think a lie. We were called up for duty around there during the Shore Patrol incident. What I know is that the Zeybecks [notables of the Izmir Area] would have pushed the loosey Greeks into the sea long ago... why didn't they then? Hey look we're giving asking, buddy, ^{wanted} the foreign officers ~~wouldn't~~ give them a chance, ² not likely! How do the foreign officers get close meeting with the sultans royal troops? There's no way they can mess... so, what is there that they haven't messed with? - and you can say such a thing, fellow... if they haven't interfered ~~then~~ then why haven't the royal Zeybecks of Izmir put an end to the Greeks by now?.. I don't know about that but this mess won't be cleared up ~~till~~ till the Americans come with their big ^{Wonda-ox} Wonda-ox or whatever. What does a Wonda-ox have to do with it? This manda-ox business is very important! When the manda-ox comes there won't be any more Creeks and no more foreign cadet-officers... Every thing mucky-dug! Hold it! What kind of a manda-ox is it that just comes in someplace and... Is it the kind of manda-ox that we call a water-buffalo? Yes, it's the waterbuffalo kind of thing, what did you think? When the waterbuffalo-manda-ox comes... Ah, ^{get off it} more or less, if you're going to say something get it right... How is a black waterbuffalo going to make any thing out of this mess? O.k., when we said waterbuffalo we weren't talking about ones from the swamps of Noman's-land, ^{This is found to be an American waterbuffalo,} To make it short, when this manda-ox comes how is he going to do anything about this mess? I won't an answer! The answer is... the regimental chaplains ^{Told about} explained it... He was a chaplain that had been a prisoner in India, a real smart chaplain. You know who handles everything for the ~~Indians~~ Indians? What we call ~~cattle~~ ^{female} cattle... and ~~cattle~~ cattle at that... if I say "cows" will you get it! Once the English ^{Took us over} ~~attacked~~ India... just like they ~~did~~ ^{Took us over} its almost... Everything was screwed up there... Everybody was fighting each other... dropping each other to bits... Then some smart guys saw that things were really bad... so they drove a bunch of cows in with em... Just old milk cows? Right, just old female black cattle, ok? How can that

I

- Captive Istanbul -

A melancholy February evening was settling on the Aegean Sea, trailing grey clouds that obliterated the mountains on the horizon. There was no trace of redness in a West which seemed to have never ^{known} seen the sun. The sea breeze had died down and on the old ship the whistling of the wind had been supplanted by the damp grumbling of tired engines and the creak of the shaking hull.

On deck ~~these~~ barrels and boxes were scattered about, the anchors were all rusted and the rigging and canvass were in tatters.

She had ~~been~~ sunk during the war and, because the shipowner could not get the insurance money he expected, she had been abandoned for years. For this reason her usual 11 knots carrying speed had fallen to 6 knots.

It ~~had been~~ fifteen days since she ~~had set~~ ^{sailed} sail from Barcelona. Were it not for the wind at her stern it is doubtful that she would have made it this far - that is, ^{to just} off the ~~island~~ ^{isle} of Lesvos - even after so ~~long~~ ^{many} days. Her cargo manifest indicated that she was carrying wheat, dried fruit and salted fish but in her ~~forward~~ holds crammed with Mauser rifles and heavy machine gun ammunition she was bringing smuggled arms to the White Russian Army of General Wrangel which, had lost to Bolsheviks, and was now ~~retreating~~ ^{retreating} toward the Crimea.

Kâmil Bey
When ~~he~~ realized that the dark shape which he was straining to see was not a ^{floating mine} ~~stray torpedo~~ he forcefully let out his breath and clenched his fist ^{both} hands had begun to tingle as he relaxed his fist which ^{had been} ~~had~~ clenched tightly ~~so~~ ^{not his} fingers tingled.

It was inconceivable that even now, two years after the armistice, the confusion of World War I would thus linger on an old ship. Only last month a Spanish ship ^{had} ~~stocked~~ a ^{floating mine} ~~stray torpedo~~ off Bozcaada and, even though a British torpedo boat came to the rescue, only one hundred of the two hundred and fifty ^{passengers} ~~aboard~~ were saved. Ever since he had heard of this event from the sarcastic and fatalistic French Captain ^(as) ~~survivor~~, Kâmil Bey would keep watch on the bridge by day and by night ^{start} ~~up~~ wide awake at the slightest sound.

"If we had been aboard ~~the~~ the ship that hit a stray mine would I have done something to save my wife and child? Why should Kâmil's family be among the hundred rescued and not among the 150 drowned?" Whenever he asked himself these questions he would shudder with a cold chill. But then, with the ^{absolute} certainty of those brave men who trusted in their physical prowess as much as in their intellect, he would ~~say~~ tell himself that he would have surely found a way to rescue his family.

In the past he would have asked these questions and answered them once - and for all. However, in the past few years, in certain situations, he could ~~sometimes~~ not summon up his old self-confidence with its old absoluteness and could not free himself of this ~~other~~ ^{hostile} unusual sensation of alarm.

Kamil Bey was the only child of Selim Pasha, one of Sultan Abdulhamid's most wealthy viziers. He had come into a very large inheritance at an early age and somehow that security enabled him to live ~~like~~ his life and even won his family with ^{the honorable dignity of the true} amateur sportsman. In ^{strenuous} thriftiness and in generosity, in boldness and in moderation, in pride and in modesty, in love (even) and ~~in~~ hate he acted with a sportsmanlike fairness. No matter what the compulsion, he believed, his sportsmanship had not wavered nor would it ever.

He had, since childhood, struggled to preserve that coolness under pressure which he considered the natural product of his spiritual strength, education and aristocratic lineage. Even in the most dangerous situations he had quelled his fear and ^{had} accustomed himself to ask no one for help.

It was his fear that he would let slip his anxiety over the story of the sunken ship to those around him and especially to his wife Nermine which kept him from using ^{his} binoculars to make out more easily whether or not that dark shadow was indeed a floating mine. And then again he was urged by ^{this} his own senseless obstinacy and feared that ~~the~~ the drawn out war would wear him, by disrupting his way of life, inflict ~~the~~ severe damage upon his nerves.

When the war broke out -- in early August of 1914 -- they were in Saint Tropez on the yacht of one of his friends, a Spanish prince. His wife was four months pregnant.

In order to decide what he would do Kamil Bey had carefully ~~thought~~ considered all aspects of the situation. He reviewed for himself all past events one by one. In the last 6 years the Ottoman Empire had undergone internal upheavals such as the "battle of Jove" and "Thirty first of March" affairs and had suffered ~~the~~ such shameful defeats as those in Tripoli and the Balkans. There could be no profit from the war which had now begun. On the contrary it was necessary that the Empire take advantage of this ruthless conflict between ~~the~~ great powers which had ^{for years} relentlessly plagued her.

~~At~~ ^{for a long time} It was necessary that she rest herself, that she ~~strive~~ to ^{struggle to revive her} ~~defeated~~ ^{defeated} to be healed, ~~to~~ to pull herself together. Thus the empire would at all costs stay out of the war or at least strive ~~to~~ with all her power to remain neutral.

and would thus ~~note~~^{facilitate} the successful creation of a balance of power in the world. ~~a coming time~~.

Most of the passengers on the yacht were European aristocrats who seemed to derive no profit ^{directly} whatsoever from the bloody struggle and ~~in any case~~ considered all talk of ~~Moscow~~^{financial matters} to be socially unacceptable. They ^{had} unanimously concluded that ~~this~~ ^{could not} ~~not~~ go on for long.

Kâmil Bey had based all of his calculations on the assumption that his country would not enter the war and so had, without hesitation, accepted the invitation of his friend to spend the fall in the prince's Chateau in Cordoba. Thus it was in a Spanish Chateau in Cordoba that he heard, in the middle of November, ~~that~~ ^{of} the Ottoman Empire's ^{and entered the war} entry into the war. (That day -- he would never forget -- he was participating in a shooting match with pistols. He would also never forget that he ^{was winning!} ~~won~~ with a score of 122.)

It was ^{well} known that the Ottoman Empire [which was too poor to (even) order a rowboat] had said that she had "purchased" two German battleships, the Goeben and ^{the} Breslau -- which ^{were, ()} holed up in the Dardanelles. Moreover, it seemed that the allies -- the British, French and Russians had swallowed this fabrication. If one were to believe incoming reports, these two ships -- now named

"the Yavuz" and "the Midilli"-- had sailed into the Black Sea with ~~British~~^{Sterns} Ottoman flags flying from their funnels and bombarded ~~the~~ Russian ports. Thus they ^{had} thrust the Ottoman Empire, already quaking at its foundations, into Germany's repulsive conflict.

(One of the guests, a young British lord had tried -- with ^{testimony} lack of taste -- to make a joke of it by saying, "If I had such marksmen as you, I, like Enver Pasha, wouldn't have hesitated to enter the war!"

Two days later, Kâmil Bey contacted the Ottoman Embassy in Madrid to inquire as to what he should do as an Ottoman citizen.

His answer, the Ambassador, was one of Sultan Abdulhamid's most experienced diplomats; ^{he had known the} late Selim Pasha [Kâmil Bey's father] quite well and ^{had almost native command} → having learned it was ^{so} well acquainted with Kâmil Bey, ⁷⁶ of whom he said "You were virtually born in my hands." He also knew that Kâmil Bey had learned French from a Parisienne governess and studied at the French lycée, Galatasaray, until he knew it like a native; that, after graduating from Oxford, he had studied painting for years in Italy, and that he read and spoke Spanish with ease. Without beating around the bush he said that Kâmil Bey could, "fulfill his obligation to defend his blessed homeland and carry out his duty to willingly spill his last drop of blood on her behalf... by serving as a translator for the Embassy!"

As he stood there, his eyes blinking ^{nervously} and obviously taken aback by the curving ~~the~~ Ambassador realized ~~that~~ immediately that Kâmil Bey was unable to reconcile this offer with his principles of sportsmanlike fair play, ~~and that in the idea that he might be considered to have tried to protect himself of his possibly~~ seeking a way out through favoritism had wounded him to the quick -- that is, in his ^{sophomore} dignity. As soon as he realized, the Ambassador changed his tone, "The job is a blessed one," he said, "for ~~it~~ there can be no pay." adding without hesitation, ^{at this time} ~~he added,~~ "... Since our noble nation has not the resources ^{even door keeper's} to pay a ~~fan~~ cor's salary." Then he fell silent for a moment, shrugged his shoulders with a ponderous helplessness and let his ^{open!} hands fall ~~to~~ the desk. Then he arose and, with ^{The} finally irresistible authority of a father's friend, led Kâmil Bey to the office in which he was to work. He then asked Kâmil Bey ~~whether~~ the ^{the young man} ~~name of his hotel in Madrid~~ and without waiting for an answer, informed him that he himself was taking on the task of ^{finding him a house.} (As a matter of fact he was taking on no task at all but rather killing two birds with one stone by finding a suitable tenant for the long time vacant mansion of his attractive Spanish lady-friend.)

Just as Kâmil Bey was about to leave, the Ambassador's face assumed a serious expression, as if he had Just remembered an important point; "My child, you couldn't have gone anywhere ... through battlefields with a woman just about to give birth!" Kamil Bey did not much like the "my child." He frowned and the Ambassador went on, "Hopefully this chaos will not go on for long... In a few months we'll put you and your baby on a luxury liner and... now off you go!" As he said this he caressed Kamil Bey's shoulder as though forgiving a mischievous child.

Kamil Bey had always, ever since childhood, been repelled by such caresses. He steeled himself with all his strength to keep himself from jerking his body away and stood there stiffly bore the indignity.

Weeks passed, and mouths. The war ~~continued~~ exhibited a "delicate coquetry", sufficient to confuse and confound even that shrewd Ottoman Diplomat, the Ambassador to Madrid.

- First of all the Ottoman Empire ^{defeated} lost a 90,000 man army at Sarikamish, ^(EAST) Then later they routed the British at Kutulamara ^{Iraq (Tigris)} and took their Generals prisoner, and a bit later they crossed the (Tih) desert and managed to envelope the Suez canal. The same army which 3 years before had been defeated with shameful ease by 4 small Balkan ^{states} Now, defended the Dardanelles for months against the most awesome weapons of the "7 nations."

- allies -

But alas, as the war raged on it became ever more clear that neither (their) recognition of q French & British treachery and ^(minus its application) ~~subsequent withdrawal~~, ^{Sikes-Picot} nor even the defense of the Dardanelles would be of any use. ~~With~~ With a slow but irresistible (obviousness) the course of events was turning against the German-Austrian-Bulgarian-Ottoman side and the Ambassador could only repeat, "Oh God, how dreadful...
Oh God, there must be a way out of this mess, this curse!"
In response the Sublime Porte had forbidden the word
"peace" and had long ago (no doubt) expunged it from the dictionary.

~~In~~ In March of 1917, as everyone was saying, "OK, now what's going to happen?" a revolution [why or against whom no one quite knew] broke out in Russia. It grew, ~~and~~ spread, ~~and~~ changed and finally in a large part of Anatolia -- as far as Thessaloniki -- which ~~had~~ no one doubted had been lost forever, the Tsarist Army scattered and withdrew.
Then, before the staff of the Madrid Embassy could breathe a sigh of relief, the United States of America entered the war against Germany. The news reached the Embassy in the form of a ^{cipher} ~~coded~~ letter which the poor Ambassador, thinking it was just more nonsense, did not see fit to ~~decode~~. He threw the ~~letter~~ still unread cipher telling of America's entry into the war down on the table and was talking with Kâmil Bey in the Armenian accent which he was fond of assuming whenever he was in a good mood.

"My dear Kâmil Bey, I consider the situation first rate from now on, really and truly ^{more than} first rate! God has gotten us ~~out~~ ^{through} the great disaster and the Tzarist cause has been officially dismissed.

The unexpected alteration of his financial circumstances had helped Kâmil Bey to realize -- long before Enver Pasha and Kaiser Wilhelm -- that what the Ambassador had termed "a first rate situation" was in fact a real disaster. ~~the~~ Money orders -- which had previously come through ^{all} neutral nations according to a complex system which defied the understanding of even the shrewdest bankers -- were abruptly cut off. His farms in Syria and Mosul had long since ceased to provide Kâmil Bey with any income. For a year and a half he had tried to prevent any changes in their way of life by selling off ^{both} his property in Istanbul and the diamonds which Nervning had bought. After the Treaty of Moudros had been signed and acceded to by the Ottoman Empire, Kâmil Bey's financial situation -- contrary to all expectations -- collapsed completely.

The Union and Progress leaders had fled and in Istanbul the war profiteers hid in their corners and sat on their money. Thus there was no one left to buy jewels -- let alone property -- no matter how cheap the price. On top of this,^{in 1919} just when everyone was saying that peace was 100% certain the news came that Greece had landed soldiers in Izmir and fighting had broken out here and there in Anatolia.

At one time Kamil Bey traveled to London and from there to Paris seeking an answer to his financial ~~problems~~^{ills}. He found ~~that~~ everybody and everything drastically changed. One person's promise was broken by another; the most trusted friends forgot what they had said the day after they said it. The ^{winners} conquerors, all of them, were consumed by the desire to seize the largest share of the spoils. Everyone was greedy & the refinement of the prewar era seemed to have ~~passed away~~ passed away and been buried with the dead.

Kamil Bey tried to conceal his concern from his family and friends and for a time waited ~~uselessly~~^{to no avail} in Madrid for things to settle down. When it was no longer possible survive (financially) he had used the trip as an excuse to sell everything he had and boarded this old ship in Barcelona.

-- Pandon Monsor, is the captain on deck?

Nermine had asked this in French. She sounded worried. When she recognized her husband in the evening twilight she hesitated ^{stopped short}.

not all alone to float over and you're ~~the~~ ~~waggon~~

and sat on their money. Thus there was no one left to buy jewels -- let alone property -- no matter how cheap the price. On top of this, ^{in 1919} just when everyone was saying that peace was 100% certain the news came that Greece had landed soldiers in Izmir and fighting had broken out here and there in Anatolia.

At one time Kamil Bey ~~had~~ traveled to London and from there to Paris seeking an ^{ready for} answer to his financial ~~problems~~ ^{needs}. He found ~~that~~ everybody and everything drastically changed. One person's promise was broken by another; the most trusted friends forgot what they had said the day after they said it. The ^{winners} conquerors, all of them, were consumed by ~~the~~ ^a desire to seize the largest share of the spoils. Everyone was greedy, ^{? ?} & the refinement of the prewar era seemed to have ^{passed away} died and been buried with the dead.

Kamil Bey ~~tried to~~ forced himself to conceal his concern from his family and friends and for a time waited ^{To no avail} uselessly in Madrid for things to settle down. When it was no longer possible survive (financially) he had used the trip as an excuse to sell everything he had and boarded this old ship in Barcelona.

-- Pandon Monsieur, is the captain on deck?

Nermine had asked this in French. She sounded worried. When she recognized her husband in the evening twilight she ^{stopped short} hesitated.

not all about to float over and you ~~are~~ ^{are} so good

-- Is it you? Aren't you cold?

-- What are you going to do with the Captain

The French captain had left the bridge.

Holding the bill of his cap with two fingers he bowed to Némie.

-- At your service, my dear Madame.

-- Oh I'm sorry, it's nothing really I was going to ask about Bozcaada -- will we pass it at night?

-- Bozcaada! which Bozcaada? The captain suddenly remembered -- I've got it! Ah yes, now I know why you ask!

Kamil Bey interrupted:

-- And why do you think she asked, monsieur Capitain?

-- Women cannot help but concern themselves over disasters at sea. Dear madame Kamil, she seemed so unconcerned while listening to the story.

Némie tried a half-hearted fib,

-- no, not at all. How could you suppose ... Which story? I had long since forgotten ...

Kamil Bey looked intently at his wife and questioned her softly:

-- Were you really afraid? Oh Némie you are like a child -- just exactly ... a floating mine ... No, they are not all about to float over and gather ~~at~~ Bozcaada

The Captain smiled good humoredly

-- We prudent men fear fearless women my dear sir & that is why over women often pretend fear in situations when they are not afraid.

This time Nenin raised her head with pride:

-- I am not afraid. So long as Kamil is with me I am never afraid.

-- Bravo!

-- Because he would save us... No matter what he would save us!

-- Bravo again!

-- He'd save us - she turned to her husband - you would save us wouldn't you? For sure?

-- "Something could be done, I hope..." - Kamil Bey searched for the right words, for fear of sounding pretentious, "If some were saved... that means that something could be done. I mean, ^{the} ship which hit ~~the~~ mine ~~sank~~ sank all of a sudden... It was able to ~~call~~ call for help... Moreover... it stayed above the water until help arrived."

The lights on the bridge were burning and illuminated Nenin's face. At the age of 28 she still looked only 20. She was not only a beautiful woman but proud, polite and refined.

On the day they met - 8 years ago - Kamil Bey was stunned, unable to believe that there could be such a beautiful woman in the world. He had thought to himself that no great artist could possibly depict such loneliness.

Although most great beauties lose a bit of their loneliness when they move, when they laugh aloud, when they truly cry or stretch themselves, Nervine, ~~she~~ ^{in the most} unfettering situations was one of those who grew ever more beautiful even in the most unfettering situations. Her every movement, ^{gesture} every posture displayed her beauty in a new light. ~~Her~~ balanced realism which did not strain the limits of her knowledge and (^{eagerly} ~~an uncomfortable~~ ^{replete} ~~sometimes~~) she was able, as a twenty year old visiting Europe for the first time, to show no bewilderment when faced with western aristocrats who prided themselves on ^{love} ~~the~~ ^{ways} ~~ways~~ nobles noble for a thousand years.

In contrast to ~~Despite~~ all of Nervine's ^{weapons} ~~she had~~ personal powers ~~she had~~ one ~~weak~~ ^{weak} point.

She wanted to live in total security and ~~she~~ ^{she} ~~fully~~ faced with any insecurity, great or trifling, she showed not the slightest ability to persevere.

Just as Ramil Bey was the son of a Pasha, so was Nervine a Pasha's daughter. Until she was 20 years old she had never known any poverty, insecurity or any material or spiritual difficulty. It was said of her father, Taceddin Pascha, that he was extremely wealthy as he was an extremely compulsive gambler -- all of which was reflected to by his life-style. Although he spent many nights gambling he never once mentioned the excessive ^{sometimes} expenses of his crowded mansion or the expensive fancies of his wife and daughter. Not the slightest hint of financial stress was allowed to cross the threshold of his home.

One night, towards morning, a group of men brought Taceddin Pascha home-dead.

When the Pascha, her father, died suddenly, Nermine could not help but be brought face to face with a poverty which, until then, she had never known to exist. She saw, ~~in~~ with a vengeance, how creditors set upon a debtors house, how they grab up everything like tools and how ~~too~~ ~~undesirable~~ ~~but~~ ~~desires~~ ~~exists~~ the miserable upholsters which they have helped assort a person with an unbearable helplessness.

From that day on the vulnerable point ⁱⁿ her generally well balanced personality was the fear of being ~~sudden~~ ~~left helpless before some unexpected~~ left unexpectedly helpless before some reversal of fortunes.

On the day that Kemal Bey was introduced to her as a suitor she looked on him & struggling only to perceive whether or not he could be depended upon

←

she found the tall broad shouldered youth of 35 to be to the end. Because of this serious demeanor because he appeared so trustworthy as a mature man of 35, she accepted him as her future husband. In this decision Kamel Bey's legendary intuition played an equal part with the feeling of trust engendered by his personality. After their marriage, ^{After their marriage,} This sense of trusting dependency, instead of facilitating her love for her husband, had raised a strange barrier between them. Upon ^{time} ~~occasions~~ ^{times} of necessity she would run to the protection ~~and~~ ^{start} of her husband with renewed confidence. ~~This process, however,~~ ~~usually by toxicing her emotionally and forcing~~ ~~and because~~ the expenditure of her emotional energies at every occurrence, ~~was the~~ ^{caused by} this process ~~→~~ would not allow her to give full rein to love and left her, a bit ^{bashful} wife and a bit ashamed ~~of~~,
~~with an all but invisible coldness.~~

Kamel Bey had never, during his bachelor days, confused love with passing attractions and so loved Verain with all (the strength) of ~~the~~ ^{on} vajaded hearts. ~~to this~~ ~~affection was~~ ^{expressed by} the serious ungrudging concern and warmth of true love. ~~The reason~~ ~~that~~ ~~he~~ was unable to resist, (for ~~so~~ many years) his wife's hidden coldness only because he believed himself to be a totally dependable man and, thus, considered it only natural that the woman he loved would turn to him at the slightest upset.

~~when it had not quite pleased~~
~~When Nithin, tired with the danger of the ship~~ ~~being sunk by a mine,~~

They ~~had~~ he was quite pleased when Nemire, without any rational reason, asserted that if they ~~had~~ ^{struck} ~~the~~ ~~steal~~ ~~by~~ as mine, Kamil would save them.
He put his arm about his wife's waist.

- How often have I told you Nemire, there is no need to be frightened of any sort of chapter, even if it's a mine!

This time, the French Captain's hearty Bravo had hardly been uttered when the dinner bell rang.

Since they left Barcelona, Kamil Beg's daughter Ayshe had been seated at the Captain's right for meals and even though she was only six, she ~~still~~ did her best to behave like a well brought up young lady worthy of this place or honor. At first glance she appeared dark complected and ^{in general aspect} Spanish which ~~dark~~ ~~was~~ ~~occasionally~~ seemed ~~to~~ in keeping with her coloring. She had immediately become friends with the [First Officer] and within a few days this friendship had grown into a comfortable ^{desire} ~~affection~~.
The [First Officer] was a friend speaking Belgian, a bushy ~~penn~~ man like Ayshe's father. Of all sports he liked boxing best and ^{boasted} prided himself, like a child, ^{on} his large fists and thick muscles. During the first days he had tried to make a pass at Nemire but upon realizing, to his mortification, that the woman had no idea what sooner that such things went on in the world, he gave up the idea.

For a time he had firmly believed that Daniel Bey was a Jew - which accounted, in his own mind, for the latter's dark complexion. After all it was hardly possible that a Turk could ~~ever~~ speak English, French and Spanish so fluently. If he only spoke them, no sweat! But this business of reading big thick books...?

On the morning of the third day ~~ago~~, while he was working out with ~~a~~ one of the Black sailors, the Jew-Turk had watched for a time and then thought he was knocking the black boy sound party good. This guy had smiled and shook his head as if to say 'no good.'

This really ticked the Belgian off and he asked the man why he was smiling.

Then wouldn't that Jew-Turk tell him that his defiance left him open and that ~~that were~~ ~~while~~ he was punishing he put himself in danger? "I'll show that ~~open~~
~~a better something~~" ~~he~~ ~~said to himself~~ ~~~~~~~~~
The ~~Town-guy~~ [post office] ~~said~~ ^{thinking} to himself, "Let's have a little fun with this one," (softly and sweetly) asked, "Would you please sit, show me?"

When the Jew-Turk or Turk-Jew or whatever ~~he~~ set about to explain he required, ever so politely, that Daniel Bey ^{put on} the gloves and show him that way.

Kamil Bey put on the gloves without hesitation and in the first exchange dropped the Belgian on his tail. While the fellow was still struggling to make out where the punch came from and how it got to his jaw, Kamil Bey put out his gloves to the black sailor to have them untied.

-- Hold it a minute, please don't take them off! Just once more ...

Kamil Bey asked the foolish young man how much he charged for an hour's workout and then tried to explain why it would be impossible to hit him any more without paying the fees. The Belgian knew, from his own country, what prohibitions regulate ~~the~~ relations between aristocrats and commoners. Blushing, he apologized and thenceforth behaved in a truly respectful manner toward ~~the~~ Kamil Bey and his family.

-- Please pass the salt, Monsieur Albert!

The first Officer passed the salt to Alybe with the solicitous despatch of one serving a great aristocrat.

-- Thank you! They don't seem to have put ⁱⁿ any salt, do they?

The Nomin signalled with her eyes for her daughter to be quiet.

The Captain ~~who~~ was relating what he had seen and heard about the Bolsheviks

Everything ~~was~~ was ^{Today} Topaz ^{Topaz} broken loose. Hunger, poverty, all that and there some... life and property were not safe or Because nowhere was there any law and order...

-- Svin? Yes, he knew how to tear it down but where it come time to build...? — he sighed as though suffering through a momentous Tragedy: — What do your socialists say about this business?

-- We don't have any socialists.

-- You don't? But such a thing is impossible...
There can't be a country without socialists.

-- So far as I know... Before we left there weren't any. I never heard of any.

-- Where did you leave your country?

-- In 1912... None had been heard of them. And until they appeared later I would have heard, certainly!

-- A country without socialists... It must be the paradise written about in the Holy Book... Unbelievable...
He thought for a moment, loosened his shirt collar with two fingers and took up his wine glass... — What I don't understand is... if there aren't any socialists
... why did we let the Bolsheviks land at Tzniit?...
I had it just the other day, I remember well. They wanted to become Bolsheviks, a few men in your country... — He turned to the First Officer: What was the name of that Posha ...

— He wasn't a Posha sir, a major of the Sultan

- The captain gave his name!
- Veyier Shmeizer ... - What's his name
 - Kāmil Pasha ... Oh excuse me! Kāmil is your name ...
 - Mightn't it be Kāmil Pasha? Mustafa Kāmil Pasha?
 - That's it! - The Captain was pleased - We've got it!
Kāmil Pasha!
 - He's supposed to be a Bolshevik? Kāmil pasha?
 - Of course he is. Would he want war if he weren't a Bolshevik?

From that moment Ayshe had forgotten the meal; she looked back and forth from the Captain to her father.

The captain had read in the papers why the Bolsheviks did not want peace. He struggled to summarize what he had read.

Kāmil Bey did not know much about Bolsheviks but he knew that the Captain did not have any ~~more~~ information than the nonsense written by the royalist papers in Spain.

The Ambassador in Madrid had scarcely noticed at all about Bolsheviks: "These are just the anarchists we all know about ... Does and then they throw a few bombs around, kill some great man and then quiet down", he had said. He also mentioned having heard, from the head writer of a noted newspaper who had good sources in the Spanish government, that Lenin was most certainly a German agent.

The ship's Captain was very upset by the Bolsheviks. He could not conceive of how a Captain and a common crewman could possibly live as equals, and really could not comprehend why on earth religion was under attack. "Riches will be shared with the masses... if there is no way to get rich who's going to work? Where do they find such fools?" Appraising the situation from his own point of view he asked, "If it weren't possible ^{that}, in the future, ^{I might be able to} to live around and live off my income, then would I work?" and to prove his objectivity he would point to his collar and say, "... And I haven't got anything in this world to lose but my shirt!"

The captain was particular about clean shirts. On this old ship he managed, as though performing a miracle, to always wear a clean shirt. Even though people consider clean shirts to be quite an everyday thing, anyone who saw him twice would ~~perceive~~, no doubt, perceive that he was an extraordinary ^{clean shirt} devotee!

-- Just think, there is no soap in Russia today... You can't wash your face much less your shirt! A person would die... In my opinion a man can take fast about any thing but he can't take dirty clothes... and he cannot live without washing himself at least once a day! In France I read Action Française! Am I a royalist? No! Then why do I read it?... Because they write the truth...